Beacon Press The New York Times best-selling book exploring the counterproductive reactions white people have when their assumptions about race are challenged, and how these reactions maintain racial inequality. In this "vital, necessary, and beautiful book" (Michael Eric Dyson), antiracist educator Robin DiAngelo deftly illuminates the phenomenon of white fragility and "allows us to understand racism as a practice not restricted to 'bad people' (Claudia Rankine). Referring to the defensive moves that white people make when challenged racially, white fragility is characterized by emotions such as anger, fear, and guilt, and by behaviors including argumentation and silence. These behaviors, in turn, function to reinstate white racial equilibrium and prevent any meaningful cross-racial dialogue. In this in-depth exploration, DiAngelo examines how white fragility develops, how it protects racial inequality, and what we can do to engage more constructively.

SOCIOLOGY

A BRIEF INTRODUCTION, BY SCHAEFER

PROBLEM-SOLVING SOCIOLOGY

A GUIDE FOR STUDENTS

Oxford University Press A broad resource that offers tools for how to conduct problem-solving sociology in order to deepen and reformulate our understanding of society. Most students arrive in graduate sociology programs eager to engage with the pressing social and political issues of the day. Yet that initial enthusiasm does not always survive the professional socialization of graduate school. In Problem-Solving Sociology, Monica Prasad shows graduate students and early career sociologists how to conduct research that uses sociological theory to help solve real-world problems, and how to use problem-solving to improve sociological theory. Prasad discusses how to be objective when examining issues of injustice and oppression, and provides methodological strategies and plenty of exercises for research aimed at creating change. She gives examples throughout of problem-solving research conducted at all levels, from undergraduate theses to the major figures of the discipline. She also considers how to respond to some common objections; where problem-solving fits into the landscape of sociological practice; and how to build a life in problem-solving.

SOCIOLOGY

A BRIEF INTRODUCTION

TERRIBLE MAGNIFICENT SOCIOLOGY

WITH REGISTRATION CARD

W.W. Norton & Company Using engaging stories and a diverse cast of characters, Lisa Wade memorably delivers what C. Wright Mills described as both the terrible and the magnificent lessons of sociology. With chapters that build upon one another, Terrible Magnificent Sociology represents a new kind of introduction to sociology. Recognizing the many statuses students carry, Wade goes beyond race, class, and gender, considering inequalities of all kinds—and their intersections. She also highlights the remarkable diversity of sociology, not only of its methods and approaches but also of the scholars themselves, emphasizing the contributions of women, immigrants, and people of color. The book ends with an inspiring call to action, urging students to use their sociological imaginations to improve the world in which they live.

THE MATRIX OF RACE

SOCIAL CONSTRUCTION, INTERSECTIONALITY, AND INEQUALITY

Sage Publications, Incorporated This text for race and ethnic relations courses is written by three leading scholars and reflects a very contemporary way of looking at race, minorities, and intergroup relations. Older texts use a "categorical" approach and feature a series of chapters that examine one minority group at a time (African Americans, Latino/a Americans, Asian Americans, Native Americans, etc.). Newer texts designed within the last 5-10 years are more likely to be organized topically, discuss various racial and ethnic minorities within the context of these topics, and use the most current theories and perspectives in this field. The Matrix of Race is built around these core ideas: -Race is a both a social construction and a social institution -Race is intersectional--it is embedded within other statuses (such as gender, social class, sexuality) -Concepts of race change over time and as we move from one physical location to another -We are all active agents in upholding, reproducing, or resisting constructions of race The chapters in Part I introduce basic concepts about race and racism, describe the Matrix approach to studying race, and narrate the history of race in the Americas from its colonial beginnings to the early founding of the United States. Part II is a series of chapters that examine how race operates within the major institutions that structure our social lives: families, the legal and criminal justice system, work and the economy, the health care system, education, media, sports, and the military. In each chapter in Part II, the authors resume the historical narrative about race and examine that institution from the Matrix perspective. Borrowing from Lee Anne Bell's popular Storytelling for Social Justice book, the authors tell four different kinds of "stories" about race throughout that give personal voices to ideas: -Stock stories told by the dominant group and encoded in law, policy, history, and culture -Concealed stories that look critically at stock stories and offer a different understanding of race -Resistance stories that show individuals struggling to challenge and overturn stock stories - Transforming stories that offer a new vision of racial justice and social change.
